

WHY YOU'RE READING THIS

If you're a shopkeeper reading this, it may have been given to you by someone who thinks of your space as an important place to access art or media.

Video games have come a long way from Tetris and Pac-Man. There really is something for everyone, especially in independent games.

Your bookstore could stock some awesome interactive story experiences, your music store could have the coolest rhythm games, and your game store could be on the cutting edge of the latest and greatest fun!

YOU can help quality developers who struggle to gain a platform in an ever-changing market find players that remind them why they make games!

DIGITAL GAMES, PHYSICAL SPACES: bridging the gap between indie games and local business spaces

Project Menagerie GETS INDIE GAMES IN LOCAL SPACES!

SHOPKEEPER'S EDITION

we are PROJECT MENAGERIE!

Project Menagerie is a volunteer-run initiative that aims to get more indie games in more physical spaces in an age of digital-only dominance.

Sony will cease manufacturing physical games in 2028. Valve has made it so gamers no longer get to fully own the media they buy for their own use under the guise of "convenience."

In reality, the people still want physical games, and companies with the most power over the art form we love the most is trying to take away our ownership of it. They care about profit more than media preservation

Indie game developers who care about this issue are making their own physical games, and if you care too, we can help you get their games in your shop!

PHYSICAL GAMES IN 2026?

Nowadays, indie developers make their games available on custom USB drives, packaging them in all sorts of interesting ways to attract players!

You can read our free informational zine on how indie developers can make their own physical copies here!
